

Saul's life was completely changed now. Instead of persecuting those who believed in Jesus, he became a believer himself. This meant his former friends hated him and his new friends were very suspicious of him. Some people tried to kill him, but Saul's new friends lowered him down the city wall, so he could escape.